National Commission for Scheduled Tribes (NCST) is a Constitutional body established under Article 338A of the Constitution of India. The Commission is constituted by the President by warrant under his hand and seal.

Organizational Structure of the Commission:

Post and the Status-

- The Chairperson - Union Cabinet Minister
- The Vice-Chairperson - Minister of State
- Members (3) - Secretary to the Govt. of India

The Commission has its headquarter at New Delhi and six regional offices across the country. The framers of the Constitution realized that the tribal communities have a special cultural identity and unique developmental challenges.

For centuries, the tribal community has been living a development model that has included ecological balance alongside economic growth. In the modern world, it is called sustainable development. Keeping this perspective in mind the specific requirements of the Scheduled Tribes were recognized.

To protect the rights of Scheduled Tribes and to monitor the development plans drawn for them, The National Commission for Scheduled Tribes has been given a special Constitutional status.

Tribal Society and the Freedom Struggle

The tribal society of India has always been an integral part of Indian civilization and culture with its spiritual traditions, unique customs, and the high virtues of life. Whenever the country's security was at stake, tribal society stood strong to protect the nation by their valor and sacrifice.

When the Britishers started to expand their empire in India, tribal society was among the first to give them a tough time from their humble forest lands. The tribal society never accepted the slavery of the British and thus strong resistance against the British Rule became a frequent occurrence.

Be it the Pahariya movement led by Tilka Manjhi, the rebellion of the Koya tribe, the armed struggle by the Kol tribe, the struggle under the leadership of Bhagwan Birsu Munda, the Santhal rebellion in guidance of Siddhu and Kanhu, the great sacrifice of Mangarh many movements by the Bhils or be it the Naga movement in the commands of Rani Gaideloy, there has been a rich tradition of sacrifice and rebellions of the tribal society against the British.

Apart from organized movements and rebellions, there is a long list of individual sacrifices as well by the tribal society. In truth, thousands of heroes who sacrificed for the freedom of the nation couldn't even make it to the pages of history!

Even today, many such folk songs and stories are prevalent in the tribal society which underline the struggle of the tribal society with the British Rulers.

Countless salutes to the sacrifice made by the tribal society for the freedom of India!

Dear students,

It is a matter of great joy that we all are celebrating the Azadi Ka Amrit Mahotsav this year. This is a golden opportunity to remember all those struggles and sacrifices made by our heroes to free India from the ordeals of the British Empire. It's about time that we revisit those tales of valor and patriotism!

We all know that tribal society has made unforgettable contributions in the freedom struggle. Apart from organized movements, thousands of individual sacrifices have also been made.

Programs are being held across the country, in more than 100 Universities on the theme "Tribal Heroes in India's Freedom Struggle". Purpose is to introduce the tribal youth to the contributions and sacrifices of the tribal community in the freedom struggle.

Let us all become a part of this important event that is to take place in our University, to listen to the tales of our ancestors, to know their sacrifices and to revive a sense of pride in our glorious society.

At the same time, this is also an occasion when we follow the footsteps of our ancestors and pledge to play our part in protecting and developing this great nation.
