"Studying Contested Pasts: Challenges of Historical Writing and Method"

Prof. Lakshmi Subramanian

Visiting Professor of History, BITS Pilani Goa Campus

Auditorium, Faculty Block E (near Chemistry block). Goa University

Abstract: The presentation will focus on the evolution of the historical method and its dynamic response to the political context in which pasts were and are conceptualised. It argues for the importance of method and protocols for doing social science research, of which history is a part and which emerged and crystallized in the context of the institutionalization of disciplines. How has academic history writing been separated from popular history writing? How do we bridge the gap? How do we at least understand the challenges inherent in the practice of history writing? How have these been addressed in the past and what do they hold for our concerns in the present? The presentation will attempt to address some of these issues.

Profile of the Speaker: Prof. Lakshmi Subramanian is currently Visiting professor of history, BITS, Pilani Goa campus and has had a long and distinguished teaching and research career. Her research interests include maritime and business history, history of the Indian Ocean and cultural history of music and performance in South India. Her publications include From the Tanjore Court to the Madras Music Academy A social history of music in south India (O.U.P., 2006), The Sovereign and the Pirate Ordering maritime subjects in India's western littoral (O.U.P., 2010) and Singing Gandhi's India Music and Sonic nationalism (Roli Books, 2020)
