The objective/description of the activity	Objective: To inspire and motivate students and educators from diverse disciplines, steering them towards the wonders of Science. This initiative aims to cultivate a multidisciplinary educational environment, echoing the visionary recommendations of NEP 2020. An email informing all the students and teaching staff about the talk at the Seminar Hall of SCS building of Goa University was sent by SCS events committee chair, Dr. Prachi Torney Dr. Kiran Dhavskar, the SCS coordinator of the event, welcomed the audience and introduced the speaker. Prof. Raghuvir Ramakant Pissurlenkar from Goa College of Pharmacy, and invited speaker on stage to deliver his talk The speaker explained. Drug discovery is time-consuming and pricey; and how computational tools are revolutionizing drug discovery by enabling the rapid screening of vast chemical libraries and the prediction of drug-target interactions. In the future, drug discovery platforms will become more prevalent, significantly reducing the time and cost associated with developing new therapeutics. The use of computational tools to predict the pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics of compounds will improve the efficiency of the drug development process. The speaker also informed about upcoming workshops on Molecular docking to the audience, motivating them to learn more by venturing into the field An interactive session with active participation from students and faculty members followed the talk. The seminar concluded with a presentation of memento to the guest speaker by Prof. VMS Verenkar, the Dean of the School of Chemical Sciences and with a vote of thanks from the coordinator of the event
Benefit/Key outcome of the event	The event successfully enlightened the MSc students towards the role of computational chemistry in drug discovery
